

Subject: If Tomorrow Comes Without You—Be Prepared

I want to ask you for a few minutes for something we usually avoid, but that is deeply important.

No one plans to be absent. No one wants to think about difficult scenarios. But the reality is that if one day you're not here—whether temporarily or permanently—your family will need more than good intentions: they will need clarity, access, and direction.

The Family Continuity questionnaire is not just another document. It is, quite literally, the roadmap you would leave your family to help them navigate a difficult moment.

It's where everything that today only you know becomes organized:

- Your bank and investment accounts
- Insurance and beneficiaries
- Properties and obligations
- Key contacts (attorney, advisor, accountant, etc.)
- Digital access and location of important documents

In a moment of stress or grief, that level of organization can make all the difference. It can prevent frustration, uncertainty, and costly mistakes. But more importantly, it can give peace of mind to those you love most.

Completing this document is an act of responsibility... but also an act of love.

Don't leave it for later. Don't leave it to memory. Don't leave it incomplete.

Do it for them.

Thank you for taking the time to do it right.

"You gotta do what you gotta do." – Sylvester Stallone